letter from the director and board chair

Forefront's first year as a new organization has been nothing short of remarkable.

In our annual report read more about how Forefront has led collaborations between key stakeholders, legislators and state officials to pass legislation that has the potential to bring about culture changes in schools and healthcare organizations to improve care for those who are at the highest risk for suicide.

We have improved the skills of hundreds of mental health professionals equipping them to assist individuals at risk for suicide.

We have reached out to news media to raise public awareness of the public health problem of suicide to create a more hopeful narrative about the ability to prevent suicide.

Forefront Cares is a vital program providing support, comfort and education to families in Washington State newly bereaved after a suicide.

A deep commitment to the cause of suicide prevention drives all that we do at Forefront. We know that collaboration and hard work is essential to reducing the rate of suicide in Washington by 50% in the next 10 years.

Next year, we will continue to work on the policy and training dissemination fronts as we help implement the important suicide prevention laws we helped to pass in Washington. We will work with middle and high schools in the region to marry the prevention of social and emotional health problems with strategies to identify students who are at risk. We will grow our Forefront Cares program to help more loss survivors. We are also planning a regional conference to train journalists to improve media coverage of mental health and suicide.

Your generous financial contributions make Forefront's work possible. Many talented and committed volunteers step up to the plate to help us mightily. Let your friends know about Forefront as we are an organization that is making a difference. Everyone has a role they can play.

Thanks for being part of an incredible social movement that has newly dawned in Washington State to prevent suicide. With your help, we will continue to make a profound difference in saving lives.

Forefront has played a leading role in the passage of three important pieces of state legislation.

Our efforts have made Washington a leader in suicide prevention policy with implications for widespread dissemination of training within schools and health care settings and a sea change in culture about the ability to prevent suicide.

- In 2012 we helped pass the Matt Adler Suicide Assessment, Management and Treatment Act that mandates that behavioral health professionals receive 6 hours of relevant training in order to renew their license.
- In 2013 Forefront worked to pass legislation to equip Washington's public schools in the prevention of suicide.
- And in 2014, we worked to secure pages of a requirement that all nurses and physicians receive 6 hours of training in suicide assessment, management and treatment. This bill also allocates resources for the development of a state suicide prevention plan that addresses strategies for the prevention of suicide across the life span and for the development of a psychiatric consultation line to assist primary care providers who have questions when treating children and adults for mental health issues.

“ Forefront has been instrumental in moving best practices/policies forward on suicide prevention at the state level as well as ensuring their successful implementation at a community level to help save precious lives throughout our state. ”

training

With the passage of the Matt Adler Suicide Assessment, Management & Treatment Act in 2012, Forefront has been actively involved in organizing and facilitating training for behavioral health professionals.

Since January 2014 – when the law went into effect – Forefront has conducted 35 AMSR (Assessing & Managing Suicide Risk) workshops resulting in 918 trained professionals. Forefront staff also provided the one-day AMSR workshop to 158 graduate level social work students.

Matt G., a MSW Intern at Lifelong Aids Alliance, attended one of these workshops during spring quarter. “Because of the training I was able to remain calm, collected, direct and non-judgmental” during an assessment of a suicidal client.

In March Sue Eastgard, Director of Training, delivered a 2-day Training of Trainers for 17 professionals who are now able to facilitate AMSR to professionals across the State of Washington. To date, these trainers have delivered 18 workshops to a total of 263 professionals.

I have been a counselor for 16 years and this is the first time in all those years that I have had a full day of training focused on suicide assessment and management.

campus & schools

Tragically, two youth are lost to suicide each week in Washington State.

One in six youth are considering suicide at any given time, and suicide is the second leading cause of death among young people ages 15-24. Thus, Washington's schools and colleges are at the frontline of youth suicide prevention.

University of Washington Husky Help & Hope (H3) Initiative

In October 2013, Forefront and the University of Washington were awarded a federal grant from the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) to design and implement a campus suicide prevention initiative on the UW campus. In its inaugural year, the initiative has:

- Formed and engaged a robust stakeholder group of representatives from across campus to design a strategic plan to proactively address suicide prevention and behavioral health promotion
- Supported the first annual H3 walk to raise awareness and funds for the campus suicide prevention initiative
- Provided technical assistance to the student group Huskies for Suicide Prevention and Awareness (HSPA) regarding special events and strategic planning

- Developed protocols for faculty and staff on identifying and responding to students in distress

Secondary School Initiatives

- Forefront has partnered with various public and independent schools to provide suicide prevention education to teachers and parents
- Forefront is in the process of developing a Training Academy to assist Washington's middle and high schools in developing crisis protocols that incorporate suicide prevention as well as training and education for counselors, teachers, and parents

Thank you Forefront for intensifying the suicide prevention and mental health awareness effort on campus this year, and for supporting UW students and giving us a voice. I could not be more grateful for this organization!

Forefront uses news coverage, social media and education to change the public conversation about mental health and suicide by removing stigma and expanding awareness of prevention, support and recovery.

In 2013-14, Forefront received extensive and positive coverage in local and UW media, especially surrounding its:

- Sept. 10 launch (10 news items, including a segment on New Day Northwest)
- Legislative efforts culminating in passage of HB 2315 (17, including op-eds in the Seattle Times and Spokane Spokesman Review)
- Seattle premiere of "Four Sisters," a documentary about sibling survivors (4, including an interview with the filmmaker, Caley Cook)

"Hope After Heartache [on Jenn Stuber and Forefront] is one of the most powerful stories we have told in Columns Magazine. That story has generated the most heartfelt responses we have ever received."

JONATHAN P. MARMOR
DIRECTOR OF PUBLICATIONS
UW ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

In addition, Forefront's directors and their work were featured in:

- In-depth interviews on suicide prevention in Columns Magazine, KUOW's The Record and the UW Daily. Jenn Stuber's essay on helping survivor families during the holidays appeared in Crosscut.com
- Suicide prevention stories on KING-TV and the Tacoma News Tribune quoted Stuber and Training Director Sue Eastgard, respectively

Forefront staff also provided background, sources, story ideas, ready-to-use prevention tips and safe reporting guidance for more than 20 print and broadcast news stories.

forefront cares

Surviving the suicide of a loved one can be a lonely, painful and confusing journey.

Loss survivors ask hard questions, like “what do I say when someone asks how my father died?” “I don’t know how to answer when a stranger asks how many children I have; do I include my daughter who killed herself?”

Forefront trained 14 volunteers who willingly turned their own experience with a suicide loss into compassionate support for those who are newly bereaved. They conducted XX telephone support sessions. “I can’t tell you how much your communications mean, as they are VERY welcome”.

In addition to support by telephone we sent XX Forefront Cares package to survivors. These packages include books and resource materials, as well as items of comfort, like chocolate, a tea mug and Kleenex.

One survivor who received a cares package wrote:

Thank you very much for the Forefront box of goodies, which I’ve finally opened – many days after it arrived. In particular, I thank you for the book, “Why People Die by Suicide” by Thomas Joiner. Of all the many books that I’ve encountered about suicide and/or surviving suicide loss, it’s the only one that I’ve found worth reading.

Lauren Davis presents to regional police/fire chaplains about the Forefront Cares program.
